CRIPPLE'S HANDICAP Eased by Red Cross

Freddy Bauer, Former 'Newsie,'
Now Regular Motion Picture
Operator.

HAD INSTITUTE COURSE

Received Same Instruction as
That Prepared for Disabled Soldiers.

The item that Freddy Bauer, the "crippled newsboy" of Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street, stepped yesterday into a job usually occupied by young men whose legs and arms are all that should be of particular moment just now. For Freddy Bauer is now in life under great difficulties but all other instances of the successful reconstruction work through which the medical department of the army and the American Red Cross, laboring together, intend to make our crippled soldiers self-supporting citizens again when they come back to us from Europe.

Freddy, who had been crippled in both legs by a dislocation of his hips, decided when he was 15 years old—that was twenty-five years ago—that despite his physical drawbacks he was going to earn his living and not be a beggar. "Flopper," he decided upon the corner of Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue as the proper site for the foundation of his fortunes and there set himself up as a newsie.

Freddy holds his own. In time along came little Mike and little Kate and various other covey newsie-merchants, who tried to out-cripple Freddy from his chosen corner. A cripple was a cliché—so the raiders thought up to but not including the instant they tried to drive Freddy from his chosen corner. The result was a night Freddy walloped the interlopers, stood them on their ears and sent them skidding up and down the block.

But when he was in the midst of a mixup, in which it was all Freddy Bauer from the first smash to the final wallop, the late Jacob Hils happened along and saw the gruesome details. The newsie-merchant, a thug of loving memory and Freddy had a chat and later on the story of that sidewalk scrap was told in the pages of the Century Magazine by Mr. Hils.

Freddy married in time and three children were born to the young couple. From his newsie business he saved enough not only to bring up his children properly, but also to send his younger brothers, three of them, to school, one of the brothers now being a stenographer, another a mechanical draughtsman and the third a chauffeur in the National Army.

New Avenue is Opened. But content with his lot did not rest on Freddy. Not long ago Freddy began to notice the dozens of crippled youths who came to his corner daily and climbed the stairs in Fourth avenue, one by one, to the fourth floor, where a door or two above Freddy's corner, Freddy made inquiries. The Red Cross, he learned, had just opened gloriously equipped, but also to send his younger brothers, three of them, to school, one of the brothers now being a stenographer, another a mechanical draughtsman and the third a chauffeur in the National Army.

Up the stairs hobbled Freddy Bauer also one day recently. There, so he found, armless men and legless men were learning to operate motion picture machines, typewriting machines, to make artificial limbs and for other odd jobs, manufacturing innumerable things. The course in operating motion picture machines appealed mostly to Freddy. He spent the afternoon in the school, selling papers Freddy went to school each night.

He learned all the details of movie operating and, as he passed his examinations for a certificate. Yesterday he got his job. Beginning today the "crippled newsie" becomes Motion Picture Operator Fred Bauer, in the employ of the Red Cross. He is the only one of the leading motion picture firms, and henceforth—like the "reconstructed" crippled soldiers already here or on the way—will be a wage-earning man among wholly sound men.

CHEER FOR PATIENTS.

Red Cross Aids Ailing Soldiers in French Hospitals.

The experiences of American patients in French hospitals were related briefly in a bulletin given out by the Atlantic division of the Red Cross yesterday. NO POLITICAL BOSS IN WHITNEY HOME

Public Acts Not Community
Property, Says Wife.

Attorney-General Merton E. Lewis has any regard left for the suffrage vote or that part of it which may or may not be controlled by Mrs. Rosalie Lewis Whitney of Brooklyn, wife of Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney, he will not permit his political enemies to suggest that in the Whitney household politics is a strictly family affair.

One of the Brooklyn newspapers was heartless enough last Sunday to draw attention to the fact that among the public delegates named to attend the unofficial convention at Saratoga today was the wife of the Public Service Commissioner, and Mrs. Whitney came right down and wrote to Attorney-General Lewis in part as follows:

"May I object to having my husband either charged or credited with any political activity in which I engage, or to be myself either charged or credited with his public office? Men and women, even husbands and wives, must be considered as individuals and on their own merits and fitness. Shall we not in New York State begin on this basis?"

"While I happen to differ from you on some questions just now I know you will be fair enough to tell the 'friends of Merton E. Lewis' that I am not a 'boss' stamp. My husband, Whitney, however much I admire him."

GOVERNMENT PLANS HOUSES FOR 30,000

Site for Shipworkers' Homes on Staten Island Already Selected.

Representatives of the United States Shipping Board announced yesterday to Borough President Van Name of Richmond that the Government will begin immediately the erection of a large number of houses on Staten Island to relieve congested conditions among the workers in the shipbuilding plants on the island. For many months residents of the island and officers of the shipping building companies have been asking Government aid.

Although it has been selected, location of the houses has not been disclosed. It is understood, however, that the Government's negotiations for property are under way and have been virtually completed.

George Van Pelt, architect of the Shipping Board's housing commission, with Fred Green, engineer, and William Hunt, real estate agent of the commission, came from Washington Monday, and with Mr. Van Name inspected the island's available sites. Mr. Van Pelt, who is in charge of the commission, is a resident of the island, and his office is in the island.

The commission representatives remarked favorably upon the site, but declined yesterday to state definitely which had been selected. Mr. Van Name, however, said the Government will build a large number of houses sufficient to accommodate 30,000 persons—of which, of course, the workers' families—would be built, and that many of the buildings would be ready for occupancy before the late fall.

MARGARET CURLEY WEDS.

Becomes Bride of M. J. Burke, Manager of the 'Irish Press.'

Mrs. Margaret Curley, niece of ex-Minister to the United States, an ardent member of the Friends of Irish Freedom, was married to Michael J. NOVENA TO ST. ANN TO PROTECT SOLDIERS

Men in Trenches May Be Enrolled by Friends.

Under the auspices of the Confraternity of St. Ann, established in 1915 by its present spiritual director, the Rev. J. H. Southwick, a novena to St. Ann will begin this morning in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ann, 112 West 7th street.

The novena will continue for nine days, ending on the feast day of the saint, July 26.

This year's novena will be of special importance to American soldiers and sailors, whether they be in camp, on the sea or in the trenches. Father Southwick has announced that all can be placed under the protection of St. Ann by the simple method of having their parents, friends or relatives enroll them in the novena. The novena will be held at the church of St. Ann, 112 West 7th street. The novena will continue for nine days, ending on the feast day of the saint, July 26.

There will be two novena masses this year, one at 7 and the other at 8 A. M. The novena services will take place at 12:30 and the evening service at 8 o'clock. Each will commence with the recitation of the rosary, special prayers for the novena, and a sermon by Father Southwick. Application of the relic to those who apply will follow. Petitions received from the members will be placed before the novena, and the novena will continue until the last day, when they will be burned.

At the Church of St. John Baptist, 262 West 42nd street and Lexington avenue, of which the Rev. Ferdinand Gaudet is rector, the novena to St. Ann this year will be observed with the usual ceremonies. The novena at this church attracts thousands of devotees, and a great number of novena novenas have been reported as the result of a flood of novena novenas. The novena will continue until the last day, when they will be burned.
